Madison's hometown boat will be returning to town for this weekend's Regatta with the first victory of the season on its scorecard.

The H1 Unlimited season opened last weekend with Jimmy Shane and the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison winning at Guntersville Lake in Alabama. The series comes to Madison this weekend for the APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup Madison Regatta.

H1 and Grand Prix World Supercharged hydroplanes will begin arriving in the Madison pits Thursday with testing and qualifying on Friday and racing on Saturday and Sunday.

The week is filled with Regatta events including the Roostertail Music Festival the Friday night Regatta Parade, and the Saturday night fireworks fesival. The Roostertail Music Festival will open at Bicentennial Park Thursday with a free show involving four bands and then feature music from 5 p.m. to midnight Friday when the headliner will be Mike and the Moonpies and 2 p.m. to midnight Saturday with a break for the annual fireworks show before headliner Whiskey Myers closes out the music festival.

This week's Madison Courier

The Madison Courier this week will be on a different printing schedule because of the July 4 holiday. Newspapers will be published on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday this week. There will not be a publication Thursday because of the holiday.

To be able to include more color photos of this week's activities, some of the sections may be in different locations than they normally are in the newspaper. In today's paper and tomorrow's paper, the Community section will begin on A8 and continue to A7.

Jefferson County magistrate takes office

Former Jefferson County Prosecutor Nancy Jacobs was sworn in Monday, July 1, to the newly created position of magistrate for Jefferson County. Jacobs was Jefferson County prosecutor from 1995 to 2002 and had been Switzerland County chief deputy prosecutor since 2009. She was sworn in by Indiana Senior Judge Roger Duvall, a former Scott County prosecutor and Scott County Circuit Court judge. Jefferson County Superior Court Judge Mike Hensley and Circuit Court Judge D.J. said at the time of Jacobs' selection that the addition of a magistrate will help the local courts, including possibly running three courts at once instead of two. Jacobs began work after the swearing-in. (Courier staff photo by Connor Jacobs)

BE CAREFUL!

This week still going to be hot

Courier staff report

With highs forecast in the high 80s and low 90s and a chance for afternoon scattered thunderstorms daily, Madison Regatta week is shaping up to be another warm and humid event throughout.

The National Weather Service is calling for the weather pattern to continue this week with chances for storms daily with some carrying damaging winds, brief heavy rainfall and cloud-to-ground lightning.

The highest chance for rain is Thursday, Friday and Sunday at 40 percent. There's a 20 percent chance of storms Tuesday and 30 percent on Wednesday and Saturday. The forecast for Friday calls for scattered showers and storms with highs in the 90s but there is only a chance for showers and storms Saturday when the high is expected to dip into the high 80s. The temperature will be about the same Sunday when the chance for scattered showers and storms goes up a little bit by late afternoon.

The good news is the combination of heat and humidity and poorer air quality the area saw last week is expected to shift to the southeast, making it a lot easier to breathe going into the holiday weekend. Nevertheless, with the likelihood that Regatta Weekend will see more people than normal spending time outdoors for longer periods of time, here's a few tips on how to best beat the heat and stay as safe and comfortable as possible.

- Wear lightweight, light-colored and loose-fitting clothing.
- Drink plenty of fluids.
- Avoid caffeine and alcohol.
- Try to schedule outdoor activities during the coolest part of the day.
- When outside, wear a hat or visor, sunglasses and sunscreen.

According to the King's Daughters' Health website, heat cramps are the first noticeable sign the body may be overheating. They usually occur in the arms, legs or abdomen. All activity should stop and the person should rest in a cool area while sipping water or a sports drink.

Heatstroke is a medical emergency and can be deadly if not treated in a timely manner. It occurs when the body's systems for self-cooling shut down. Symptoms that someone may be suffering from heatstroke include red, hot and dry skin, a strong pulse, a throbbing headache, dizziness, nausea, confusion and unconsciousness. A person experiencing these symptoms should immediately be cooled down with whatever means are available.

A big 'Thank You' to the people of Madison

Editor's Note: Brian Abbott, executive director of the Indiana High School Baseball Coaches Association, sent the following letter to The Madison Courier, asking that we make sure Madison knows how much its efforts were appreciated during the recent 2019 45th annual North-South All-Star Series.

From June 19-23, the City of Madison, Madison Consolidated High School, and Hanover College hosted the 2019 Indiana High School Baseball Coaches Association 45th annual North-South All-Star Series. This event started with Futures Games on Wednesday, June 19, and 60 of the top high school underclassmen in attendance followed by a weekend series featuring 50 top senior baseball players from the state of Indiana.

The players were treated to an opening night banquet emceed by Madison's own Nick Griffith and featuring IU Head Coach Jeff Mercer as the guest speaker and culminated with announcement of the Indiana high school player of the year award. Hanover College was a gracious host for the banquet and for lodging the all-stars. Thank You Hanover College!

That being said, the true all-stars of this event were the people of Madison. Visit Madison was very instrumental in the organizational piece of this event. Tawana Thomas and Sarah Prasil, thank you! I pray the good folks in Madison, Indiana, understand what an asset you are to the community. Your attention to detail and energy were key factors in making the weekend run smoothly.....your desire to put your "best foot forward" was noted by the IHSBCA leadership and the fans/parents in attendance. Thank You!

Madison Consolidated Schools Supt. Jeff Studebaker, MCHS Principal Michael Gasaway and MCHS Athletic Director Joe Bronkella, your foresight in bringing this event to Madison and the support you gave to your baseball staff were amazing! I have been involved with this event for over 20 years and have never seen a more organized and articulated effort as was displayed during this weekend. Your leadership was much appreciated. Thank You!

To Head Baseball Coach Tim Armstrong and his staff — Joe Jenner, Mike Modisett, Drew Frazier, Ryan Mahoney and Derek Wynn among others — I am not sure I have the words to express the selflessness and service that I witnessed over that five-day time period! The tireless efforts to fight the rain, prepare the field, and still do everything with class was not only heart warming, but inspiring to watch. You love what you do and it shows! Gary O'Neal Field looked amazing and all the work you did leading up to the series was impressive....new scoreboard, windscreens, locker rooms, and just your overall first class approach were noted by all. Madison Schools and the community, in general, are very fortunate to have you working with their young people and representing the sport of baseball. Thank You is not enough, but it is the best I can offer in words.

Brian Abbott
IHSBCA Executive Director

Postscript: Tim Armstrong, the head baseball coach at Madison, reports the citizens of Madison turned out to show their support as well. Armstrong said that more than 450 people paid to attend each day. In working with the association on planning, Armstrong said, they had been told to expect 350 to 400 spectators to attend each day. "Our whole goal was to treat these young men like All-Stars...," he said. "...and to showcase Madison."

A 90-degree afternoon turned even warmer for a New Castle man and his son when their boat "Double Trouble" caught fire Saturday at a Madison dock and was quickly engulfed in flames.

Trusty Whitehead Sr. and Trusty Whitehead II, both of New Castle, had moved their 355 Carver cruiser from Adams Marina east of Madison earlier Saturday and had docked the boat at Rivercrest Marina, 1200 W. Second St.

Trusty II was working on the boat when a fire ignited at about 4:30 p.m. He grabbed a hose and sprayed water on the fire and thought he had extinguished the blaze. That's when the flames flared again and eventually the boat eventually burned to the waterline.

The staff at Rivercrest Marina called 9-1-1 and quickly attached a line from a pontoon boat to tow the burning boat to a dock away from other boats at the marina. By that time, flames had engulfed the craft and Madison firefighters fought the hot, smoky blaze from the dock for a little over an hour in the afternoon heat as residents of the nearby condominiums looked on from their balconies.

Milton Fire & Rescue launched its fire and rescue boat from across the Ohio River in Kentucky and responded to assist firefighters from Madison as a safety precaution. With Madison firefighters wearing heavy turnout gear and battling the blaze from the narrow dock, the Milton rescue boat was on standby to quickly assist in the event that a firefighter fell off the dock into the water. The rescue boat also assisted with fire suppression using a handline to assist in extinguishing the fire.

No firefighters entered the water; however, two firefighter treated for the effects of the heat and smoke on a sunny, 90-degree afternoon.

Henry, Madison Co. jail proposal draws interest from others

By TRAVIS WEIK
(New Castle) Courier-Times

East Central Indiana could soon make history as the home of the first regional detention center in the state.

Sheriffs and county leaders from all over are watching Henry and Madison County to see how those two governments turn talks into an idea into reality.

Elected officials from the two counties formally agreed Thursday night to start digging into the details of what the first-of-its-kind collaborative facility would look like and how it would run.

Both Henry County and Madison County jails are overcrowded. One solution might be to build a new facility that could house people from both counties while they await trail or serve out sentences for their crimes.

A contingent from Madison County, including council members, commissioners and Sheriff Scott Mellinger, made a trip to New Castle Thursday evening to sit down with their local counterparts and learn more about the idea.

State Representative Tom Saunders (R-Lewisville) and State Senator Mike Gaskill (R-Pendleton) facilitated the joint meeting of the officials at the Henry County REMC community room.

Saunders authored and fought for the law that allows counties to even consider building a detention center that crosses county jurisdictional lines.

"In my mind, it's all about trying to save our constituents money," Saunders said.

Saunders explained the law requires both county councils and county sheriffs to agree on a regional jail concept. The respective county commissioners would then have to agree to the legal contracts.

Gaskill represents Madison County in the Statehouse and his wife, Kelly, is a Madison County Commissioner.

Senator Gaskill said it was important to get everyone in the same room to hear the same information before moving forward any further on discussions.

"We got you to the table," Saunders said. "It's yours now."

Henry County Council member Chad Malicoat made a motion, seconded by Kenon Gray, to move forward with Madison County and gather more information. The Henry County Council approved the motion unanimously.

The Madison County Council then made and approved a similar motion.

"This might be the thing to do. And if it's done right, I think it could be," said Henry County Council member Mike Thalls.

Sheriffs Ric McCorkle (Henry County) and Scott Mellinger (Madison County) both agreed to continue working together and with the fiscal bodies to pursue a regional jail.

"The only problem I've got is now I've got a second council to deal with," McCorkle said, partially joking.

"I think it can be done right. I'm not sure I trust that it will be done right. That's the bottom line," Mellinger said.

McCorkle voiced concerns about who would be responsible for what at a regional facility and who would have the ultimate last word.

Under the new law, a regional jail would have its own governing board or commission, with representatives from the partner communities.

Like McCorkle, Sheriff Mellinger wants to know which county would be responsible for lawsuits, medical costs and ongoing maintenance from a shared facility.

"Somebody has to have final authority," Mellinger said. "It can be an issue and it can cause future problems."

McCorkle also wants to make sure a regional detention facility doesn't take local authority away from the office of sheriff.

"(There are) a lot of questions. And I know they can't be answered tonight," McCorkle said told the assembled government officials. "I appreciate each and everyone of you being here. It says that you hear us, you know what we're up against."

Now that the Henry County and Madison County governments have agreed to work together on a solution, a similar joint meeting may soon be scheduled to take place in Madison County.

New laws require civics test for students

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Several new state laws are being set in motion starting this month, from a required high school state government test to allowing wrongfully incarcerated individuals to collect $50,000 a year. Starting July 1, Indiana high schools will have to administer the U.S. naturalization test, as part of a mandatory government course, that's given to immigrants hoping to become U.S. citizens. An initial plan had proposed that students had to pass the test to earn a high school diploma, but that plan was scrapped. Other new laws include allowing people who are wrongfully incarcerated be eligible to receive $50,000 for each year behind bars once a conviction is vacated due to innocence. Also, the head of the Indiana Department of Education will now be appointed by the governor, starting in 2021.

Amtrak to end one Indy-to-Chicago line

LAFAYETTE — It's the final day for Amtrak trains on the Hoosier State passenger line between Indianapolis and Chicago. The last train from Indianapolis to Chicago left the station early Sunday. The rail agency pulled the plug on the route after a loss of funding in Indiana's new state budget. Amtrak won't run the four-days-a-week train after Sunday. That's when its $3 million annual state subsidy ends. State officials say the ridership numbers were too low and the per-passenger subsidy of about $100 was too high. Amtrak runs another route, the Cardinal, between Indianapolis and Chicago as part of a Chicago-to-New York City route. A New York City-based startup has said it'll test daily bus service between Indianapolis and Chicago.

Registry lets hunters connect with owners

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Deer hunters seeking private property in Indiana to hunt on can connect with landowners, golf courses, parks, land trusts, farmers and communities interested in letting them do so. The state's Department of Natural Resources says Deer Hunt Registry system signups start July 1. The system is being administered by the DNR's Fish & Wildlife division. Signing onto the registry does not guarantee additional hunting opportunities or placement in a managed hunt. The system replaces the Hunters Helping Farmers program and incorporating the Community Hunter Access Program.

Allen commissioners ban swingers clubs

FORT WAYNE — Commissioners in northeastern Indiana's Allen County have voted to implement rules that would prohibit swingers clubs and other businesses involving live sex acts. WANE-TV reports that the regulations also would require licenses for new sexually-oriented businesses. The new regulations would allow commissioners to oversee the time, manner and place that sexually-oriented businesses could operate in the county. They do not apply to sexually-oriented businesses in Fort Wayne, New Haven or Leo-Cedarville. Commissioner Nelson Peters says the board decided to review its regulations after a business owner filed a federal lawsuit against Fort Wayne in 2018. The business owner claimed the city refused to allow the reopening of a club. Board members are expected to finalize specific regulations and vote on them in the coming weeks.

Student-run newspaper closing in Greentown

GREENTOWN — A small central Indiana town's monthly newspaper is shutting down six years after the local high school took it over and turned production over to students. The Greentown Grapevine announced in its June edition that it was ending publication, citing rising costs and declining advertising revenue and readership for the newspaper in the 2,500-person Howard County town. The Eastern Howard School Corp. decided to continue the newspaper in 2013 when the Greentown resident who started it in 1994 retired. Student journalists produced the newspaper with a community calendar, obituaries, sports coverage and stories ranging from local features to town council meetings. Eastern High School Principal Brad Fugett tells the Kokomo Tribune that the newspaper had been running a deficit and its funding was about to hit zero.

Senior US District Judge Lawrence retiring

INDIANAPOLIS — A federal judge in Indianapolis is stepping down. Senior U.S. District Judge William Lawrence's retirement is effective Sunday. Lawrence was sworn in as a judge for the Southern District of Indiana on June 26, 2008. His appointment by President George W. Bush followed his service as a magistrate judge in the Southern District, a position he had held since November 2002. Lawrence was the first magistrate judge in the Southern District to become a district judge. Prior to becoming a magistrate judge, Lawrence was an elected judge of the Marion County Circuit Court from 1996 to 2002.

Benton man dies in dog attack

GILBERTSVILLE — Police say an autopsy confirms a Benton man died in a dog attack. Kentucky State police in Mayfield said in a news release the autopsy performed on Brian S. Butler of Benton on Sunday indicated he died of sharp force trauma. The statement says two dogs located in the area of Saturday's attack in Gilbertsville were quarantined by Marshall County Animal Control. State police are handling the investigation.

Autistic boy dies after entering neighbor's pool

FLORENCE — Police in Boone County say an 11-year-old autistic boy has died after being found submerged in a neighbor's pool. Boone County sheriff's Lt. Philip Ridgell says in a news release Madou Ba's death is believed to be an accidental drowning. The statement says the boy was found unconscious in a pool Saturday in Florence and was later pronounced dead at a hospital. Police say the boy apparently scaled a fence and took off his shirt prior to entering the neighbor's backyard.

Post office suspends delivery for dog attacks

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service has suspended mail delivery to a Kentucky street that has a history of dog attacks. Postal Service spokeswoman Susan Wright said dog attacks have been a problem on Girard Drive for a long time, and the issue is only getting worse. She says a mail carrier recently dodged three loose dogs on the street, which is about 10 miles northwest of the Louisville Muhammad Ali International Airport. Residents are being asked to pick up their mail from a nearby post office. Wright says the service is working with dog owners to restore delivery. She didn't say when delivery is expected to resume. The service says mail carriers across the country suffered more than 5,700 dog attacks last year.

Hoosier Lottery to study online games

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Hoosier Lottery is set to consider whether players in Indiana should be allowed to purchase tickets online for Powerball, Mega Millions and instant games, which could provide millions of dollars in gambling revenue as in bordering states.

IGT Indiana, which runs the state lottery, said it will study the technology, marketing strategy, capital investment and crews needed to launch online games, as well as projected profit. It will present an action plan to the Hoosier Lottery Commission in 2020, which could enable online sales without legislative authorization.

The company initially presented the idea to the commission in May, but without specifics.

Dennis Rosebrough, spokesman for the Hoosier Lottery, said officials can't consider the idea without more information.

"Given where we are at this point, any discussion would be purely speculative," Rosebrough said.

Illinois and Georgia were among the earliest to roll out online lottery sales in 2012. Now, all but one of Indiana's neighboring states — Ohio — allow online sales.

Online lottery sales appeal to younger customers and are convenient.

"We just demand instant everything today, and this is just an extension of that," said Ed Feigenbaum, publisher of Indiana Gaming Insight, a newsletter about the industry.

Allan Stark

Allan D. Stark, 76, of Bedford, Kentucky, died Saturday, June 29, 2019, in Bedford.

He was born on Dec. 26, 1942, into a family of 10 children to William Strother Stark and Cordelia Alice Montfort Stark. He grew up in Trimble County and graduated from Trimble County High School in 1961. He worked at Kentucky Utilities Power Plant as a supervisor until he retired. He was a faithful member of Bedford Baptist Church and the Christ's Followers Sunday school class. He took many trips with Christ's Followers. He loved his family and his most cherished times were watching them play sports or other school and church activities. He was a Mason, a Kentucky Colonel, a retired volunteer firefighter at Bedford Fire Department and a referee for 20-plus years for KHSAA Basketball. He loved being outdoors, whether playing golf or doing yardwork. His favorite thing to do in the yard was weeding; although he wasn't physically able to do so, he always found a way to get it done. He loved to work. He worked at Walmart, and he worked at Seven Counties, where he was a transporter and prepared meals. He also loved to serenade the ladies when they were getting their meals. He loved to shoot the breeze with his old work buddies and friends at Little Town and Country.

He is survived by his wife, Faith Marie Turner Stark of Bedford; two daughters, Melody Brooke Stark and Jill Suzanne Clifford of Bedford, Kentucky; one son, Bart Allan Stark of Taylorsville, Kentucky; two sisters and three brothers, Donna Stark of Frankfort, Kentucky; Doug Stark of Bedford; David Stark of Austin, Texas; Janice Cochran of Bedford, and Danny Stark of Grant, Alabama, and eight grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his parents and two brothers and two sisters, Benny Stark, Strother Stark, Joanna Morris, and Evelyn Perkinson.

Indiana 911 dispatchers must have CPR training

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — All Indiana emergency dispatchers will have a year to complete training in telephone CPR under a new law taking effect July 1.

Officials say at least 10 percent of the nearly 2,400 people working in 911 call centers around the state lack such training.

"We recognized that minutes are being wasted when people could be helping their loved ones," said Danielle Patterson, government relations director of the American Heart Association Indiana.

Jeff Schemmer, the executive director of Hamilton County Public Safety Communications, said he considers the training to be especially vital for rural areas, where emergency crews face longer trips to arrive.

"If we can get CPR started immediately, it increases the chances of survivability for an individual suffering a heart attack or cardiac arrest," he said.

Schemmer added that his team is already skilled in telephone CPR and has been for at least 10 years.

"We have to have 24 hours a year to keep up our certification," Schemmer explained. "So, there's a lot of classes we have to continually go through whenever they update protocol."

Ed Reuter, executive director of the Statewide 9-1-1 Board, said many staff members may know hands-on CPR, but this is different.

"It's one thing to perform CPR with your hands on," he said. "It's also important to know how to describe that and take control of a scene that they can't even see."

Exploring sexuality or avoiding stress as a way to cope

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I've been going through a lot lately, and it's taken an emotional toll. Among other things, I'm in love with someone I can't have. My family is a mess, too. My parents should have divorced a long time ago but are still married, probably just to avoid the hassle of splitting up. My brother's mentally unstable, and while I do absolutely everything I can to support him, that takes a toll on my own well-being.

In my own life, I've found myself exploring my sexuality — which is, of course, an important and beautiful part of figuring out one's identity. I'm having a good time, but I am concerned that I'm using this exploration to cope with the stressful stuff I'm going through. Every day spent without the person I love is full of heartache. So, as much as I believe that sex can be wholesome, I worry I'm partaking for the wrong reasons. Any advice as to how I can tell the difference between positive sexual experiences and sex for the sake of distraction? — Coping Via Sex

Dear Coping: What concerns me here is not just that you might be using intimacy for avoidance but the particular person with whom you're being intimate, the person with whom you're in love but "can't have." Friend, you are setting yourself up for a world of hurt if you believe you can convince someone to love you back by sleeping with them or by doing anything else: Love is not a matter of convincing.

All that said, the first line of your letter cuts to the heart of the matter -- which is that you've been going through a lot. Therapy will equip you with tools to replace your unhealthy coping mechanisms. Make an appointment today.

Dear Annie: I've always wanted to have a beautiful garden, full of pretty greenery, flowers, herbs and vegetables, some of which I could use for cooking. The problem is, I don't really want to settle down any time soon. I'm too young to know where I'd like to live for the rest of my life. But I hope that doesn't mean I have to give up on my dream of tending to a lush group of plants. Is there a way I can have both a nomadic lifestyle and a thriving garden? I'm hoping there's some sort of portable, on-the-road option. — Gallivanting Green Thumb

Dear Gallivanting: You don't need to plant your roots to plant a garden. If you have access to an outdoor space, such as a balcony, patio, yard or alleyway, then container gardening — which simply means growing plants in pots as opposed to the ground or a bed — would be perfect for you. Many vegetables, including bell peppers, can be grown in large pots, provided they get at least six hours of sun per day, and most herbs commonly used in cooking can thrive in pots on sufficiently sunny windowsills. There are, of course, some limits to what you can grow in containers. Check seed packets or plant tags to see whether a plant is container-friendly before purchasing, and check out some books from the library, such as "The Vegetable Gardener's Container Bible: How to Grow a Bounty of Food in Pots, Tubs, and Other Containers," by Edward C. Smith and "Easy Container Gardens" by Pamela Crawford, for general knowledge. With your plants potted and portable, they can grow wherever you do.

In addition to container gardening, dig into community gardens in your neighborhood. Find one at https://communitygarden.org/find-a-garden.

Guntersville Redemption

Disappointing loss last year fuels HomeStreet to dominating opener

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala. — There is nothing like a heart-breaking loss to fuel a dominating win.

A year after losing one of the closest races in H1 Unlimited history, Jimmy Shane came back with a vengeance and rolled to an easy victory aboard the U-6 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison in the season-opening Southern Cup on Guntersville Lake on Sunday.

Other than a penalty in Heat 2B, Shane was unstoppable. After qualifying with a course record 162.422 mph, he won three heats in dominating fashion, including both preliminary heats on Sunday morning, a pair of races that featured fast laps in excess of 163 mph.

"I'm so excited to have a little redemption for last year. It was such a great race last year and to be on the wrong end of it was a little tough," Shane said.

"We had a rough weekend last year with a lot of penalties and a lot of disqualifications," Shane added. "It went really well this weekend."

Shane's dominance extended into the final heat where he was the odds-on favorite to win and he did not disappoint. Starting in lane two, Shane quickly took control of the race course by lap two and was not challenged as he rolled to his 18th career win in the series.

J. Michael Kelly, who provided Shane's only real competition on the day, was able to secure lane one in the final but even he had no chance to holding off the blue-and-white HomeStreet. Kelly held the lead for less than half a lap before Shane whizzed by on the backstretch and never looked back.

"I think I had a good start in the final. They just have a little too much power on the outside," Kelly said. "It's tough when you're facing a boat that has been dominant all weekend. But we're getting there. It's just going to take time."

With Shane out front and controlling the course, the race was all but over. But Kelly never laid off the throttle, hoping that some gremlin might befall the HomeStreet and allow him to steal the win.

But the HomeStreet never faltered and by the final lap, Shane was able to back off the throttle and coast to the win. Kelly gained toward the end, but still finished nearly a full mph slower.

"I was able to stay on my timing marks and I had a great run to the start/finish line and carried that speed to the first turn," Shane said. "At that point, Mike and I were still side-by-side and he gained a little bit in that first turn, but I was able to pull ahead enough to control the course and tighten it up just enough to keep him honest."

Kelly finished second while Bert Henderson placed third in the U-7 Spirit of Detroit. Henderson, an Ontario native, ran the race with a heavy heart after finding out that one of his good friends, Canadian racer Mathieu Daoust, was killed in a Hydroplane Racing League race collision in Brockville, Ontario earlier on Sunday. Henderson, who splits time in the HRL series, found out shortly after the accident.

"My heart goes out to that family. I was just thinking about them," Henderson said. "(Brockville) is my hometown and my son was racing today and my wife called me right after it happened. Our hearts sunk when we heard what happened. We're all friends and I raced for Mathieu today."

Dustin Echols capped what was arguably the best weekend in the eight-year history of the U-440 Bucket List Racing with a fourth-place in the final. While Echols did not claim a heat win, he qualified at 150.082 mph and posted two seconds and a third in preliminary heats. After years of just trying to stay out of the way, Echols was able to put his bright orange boat into the middle of the action.

Rookie Corey Peabody was fifth in the U-98 Graham Trucking. Tom Thompson's U-11 J&D's had gearbox issues and was unable to make the final heat.

The U-6 Miss HomeStreet/ Miss Madison (top, blue) pulled away quickly to easily defeated the U-12 Graham Trucking to win Sunday's Southern Cup at Guntersville Lake in Alabama after the two boat had treated fans to some tight racing (bottom) on Saturday. HomeStreet driver Jimmy Shane, who narrowly missed a win at Guntersville last year, celebrates with team manager Charlie Grooms (above) and lets youngest son, Hudson (right) get a close look at the first place trophy. Guntersville Lake was the first of five races on the 2019 H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series schedule. The series now heads to the Wild Bill Cantrell Memorial Race Course at Madison where the 2019 APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor Cup will be contested on the Ohio River at next weekend's Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival. Lillard gets supermax as NBA spending spree begins

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP Basketball Writer

Damian Lillard wasn't a top-five pick. Tobias Harris wasn't a lottery pick. Khris Middleton wasn't even a first-rounder.

Their bank balances won't know the difference soon.

Free agency opened Sunday with nearly $3 billion in deals getting struck in the opening hours — including Kyrie Irving officially picking Brooklyn, as has been expected, but without any word from Kawhi Leonard about his future plans to either stay with NBA champion Toronto or move elsewhere.

Lillard agreed to a $196 million, four-year extension with Portland that will kick in for the 2021-22 season. Harris is staying in Philadelphia for $180 million over the next five years and Middleton gave Milwaukee a bit of a discount in agreeing to a $178 million, five-year deal — $12 million shy of what he could have commanded.

Even injuries couldn't derail the spending.

Kevin Durant announced that he's leaving Golden State and joining Brooklyn on a max deal — which would be worth $164 million over four years, even though he'll miss next season with an Achilles injury and could have gotten $221 million for five years from the Warriors. And Kristaps Porzingis, who hasn't appeared in an NBA game since Feb. 6, 2018 because of a knee injury, will sign a $158 million, five-year contract to stay with Dallas.

All deals were confirmed to The Associated Press by people with knowledge of the agreements, all speaking on condition of anonymity because the NBA moratorium prevents new contracts from being signed until noon Eastern time on Saturday.

"From the trade to the Sixers in February, through the regular season and playoffs and now on to free agency, this contract is a culmination of so much in my life and basketball career," Harris wrote in an essay published on ESPN.com. "It's also a new beginning."

There were a lot of new beginnings Sunday.

Jimmy Butler agreed to a four-year, $142 million deal that will send him to Miami. Butler — a close friend of retired Miami guard Dwyane Wade — made clear to the Heat that he wanted to be in Miami, and over the next three hours the basic framework of a trade was worked out. Miami is sending Josh Richardson to Philadelphia and was still working on a package to Dallas to make the Butler move happen. Goran Dragic was considered at one time for inclusion in that trade, though by night's end he was still with Miami and the Mavs and Heat were still working through options.

At least 10 players agreed to contracts that will be worth $100 million or more. Lillard, Harris, Middleton, Durant, Porzingis, Butler, Kemba Walker ($141 million, four-year deal with Boston), Irving, Al Horford ($109 million, four years from Philadelphia) and Nikola Vucevic ($100 million, four years with Orlando) were the big early winners, with more likely to come.

Point guards did particularly well, and will likely keep doing well.

Lillard, Irving and Walker guaranteed themselves nearly a half-billion dollars. Terry Rozier left Boston for Charlotte — essentially the swap for Walker — on what will be a $58 million, three-year deal that will be completed via trade. Ricky Rubio also cashed in, getting $51 million for three years from the Phoenix Suns.

Meanwhile, the Leonard watch continued with no hints from his camp. The NBA Finals MVP and now two-time champion will meet with the Raptors in the coming days, Toronto coach Nick Nurse said.

Nurse didn't say where the Raptors will be seeing Leonard, but said the NBA champs believe they "have a really good chance" to keep him.

"I think he had a tremendous year," Nurse said at an event in Jefferson, Iowa, near his hometown. "I think it's a great place. You guys can see our fans and ownership is great. Our front office leadership is great, his teammates. You know, everything went well for him to re-sign. And probably mostly, on top of that, would be his health. He was a guy that missed a whole season, and he had a good, healthy year and played his best basketball in the playoffs."

In other key deals Sunday:

• Indiana is set to acquire 2017 rookie of the year Malcolm Brogdon from Milwaukee and sign the shooting guard to a four-year, $85 million deal.

• Harrison Barnes, as expected, is remaining in Sacramento on what will be a four-year, $85 million contract.

• The Pacers lost forward Bojan Bogdanovic to the Utah Jazz, which agreed to pay the forward $73.1 million over the next four years.

• New York, with Knicks fans hoping for a shot at Durant, is signing Julius Randle to a $63 million deal.

• Former NBA MVP Derrick Rose will sign a two-year, $15 million contract with the Detroit Pistons.

• San Antonio kept Rudy Gay on a two-year, $32 million deal, and added veteran forward DeMarre Carroll on a two-year, $12 million deal.

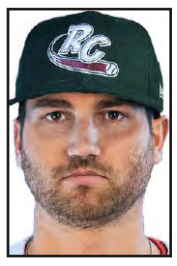
Thurston allows two runs in stint

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison's Ryan Thurston allowed two runs — both earned on three hits and two walks in Gary SouthShore's 6-3 win over the visiting Kansas City T-Bones on Saturday at U.S. Steel Yard in Gary.



Thurston

Thurston relieved in the sixth inning with Gary leading 5-1 and gave up a leadoff home run to T-Bones designated hitter Daniel Nava. He then allowed a second earned run in the seventh as he faced 10 batters and struck out one in the two innings of work.

Thurston, now 2-0 with a 3.54 ERA on the season including opening the year with the Chicago Dogs, is now 1-0 with a 4.15 ERA and 1.50 WHIP at Gary in 12 appearances. He's allowed 17 hits and walked nine in 17.1 innings for the RailCats while striking out 15.

NCAA tries to bring clarity to transfer guidelines

By RALPH D. RUSSO
AP College Football Writer

Following fresh concerns about the handling of athletes switching schools, the NCAA approved several adjustments last week to the guidelines used to determine when waivers can be granted to transfers seeking immediate eligibility to play.

The adjustments approved by the Division I council will require schools requesting a waiver for an incoming transfer to provide more documentation to support the argument — and more detailed verification of athletes' claims about why they are leaving the original school.

"The overall goal of these adjustments was to provide the membership with as much information and knowledge and education as to what they need to be including in their waiver requests," said Brandy Hataway, NCAA director of academic and membership affairs. "I don't know if I'd say it's extra (information). A lot of it is information that was already being requested in the process. It's just now letting schools know on the front end rather than them submitting their requests and staff going back to them and saying we need x, y, z."

The move comes 14 months after a directive helped clear the way for immediate eligibility for all approved requests. Previously, the legislative relief available to athletes requesting a transfer waiver was a sixth year of eligibility. Only in cases where the student was a victim of egregious behavior by a school could immediate eligibility be granted.

Since the change, high-profile cases involving quarterbacks Shea Patterson of Michigan and Justin Fields of Ohio State have been decided in favor of the players. But the overall rate of approval of waiver requests during that time has been about the same as previous years.

What has gone up significantly is the number of waiver requests.

Attorney Tom Mars, who has worked on waivers for Patterson, Fields and other college athletes, said "massive, widespread confusion" about why waivers are granted has caused the uptick in requests. He said he gets two or three calls and email a day from parents and head coaches seeking assistance.

"More often than not, the parents and coaches asking for my help have already convinced themselves that the student-athlete they want me to represent should get a waiver just because some other player they read about was given one," Mars told AP in an email. "On top of that, some head coaches have been putting undue pressure on their compliance staff to pursue waiver requests that don't stand a chance of being granted."

The waiver process affects football and basketball players more often because those sports do not allow students to transfer without having to sit out a season at their new school. In most of the so-called Olympic sports, athletes are allowed to use a one-time exception to the so-called year-in-residence rule and play right away.

The year-in-residence rule was debated and examined anew by college sports administrators in 2017 and '18. A package of transfer rules reforms passed last year by the NCAA — separate from the change to the waiver process — left the status quo in place. Sitting out a season was still required for most transfers in high-profile sports.

Changing the waiver rules to allow the opportunity for more athletes to become immediately eligible seemed like a compromise move, but it has only led to more complaints about how the waivers are granted. There was recent criticism of the NCAA after the denial of a waiver to Illinois tight end Luke Ford, who says he transferred from Georgia to be closer to home because of ailing grandparents.

The latest changes focus on the four guidelines (out of 13) most frequently cited in waiver cases: Claims of athletes being run off a team by a coach; claims of egregious behavior by the original school; injured or ill immediate family member; and injury or illness to the athlete.

The changes could lead to fewer requests being granted since it appears to raise the bar on what is required by a school to make a case for immediate eligibility for an athlete. Hataway said the measure approved by the council was not meant to curb the number of approvals and a review of the guidelines is annually done by the committee.

"Most of what's in here is what was already being done," she said. "It's just putting it in writing so that way the members would have better clarification on the front end."

Pacers' Collison retires from NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Point guard Darren Collison has decided to retire from the NBA after 10 seasons to focus on being a Jehovah's Witness.

The 31-year-old Collison played for the Indiana Pacers the last two seasons. He told ESPN's The Undefeated in a letter Friday that he decided to retire primarily to concentrate on helping the less fortunate through his faith.

"While I still love basketball, I know there is something more important, which is my family and my faith," he wrote. "I am one of Jehovah's Witnesses and my faith means everything to me. I receive so much joy from volunteering to help others and participate in a worldwide ministry. The joy I feel is unmatched."

Collison was on verge of becoming an unrestricted free agent.

He was drafted out of UCLA in 2009 and was named an All-NBA rookie the following year.

BRIDGE

IF YOU AVOID LOSERS, YOU HAVE WINNERS

What do the world's population and bridge deals have in common?

Winners and losers. The better you track and take care of winners and losers, the bigger the winner you will be.

How does that apply in this deal? South has to try to make four hearts. West leads the club jack. East takes dummy's queen with his ace and returns the suit.

South would have done well to raise two no-trump to three no-trump, where there would have been nine easy winners. But it was normal to use New Minor Forcing to try to find an eight-card major-suit fit, and to settle into four hearts when partner showed three-card support. (To rebid three spades over two no-trump should show exactly 4-4 in the majors. Remember, North's two-no-trump jump-rebid does not deny four spades.)

When in a suit contract, start by checking losers. South may have four: two spades, one diamond and one club. Then count winners. Here, declarer has nine: two spades, five hearts, one diamond and one club. For the extra winner, South could hope that West has the diamond king, or he could find spades 3-3, or he might be able to ruff a spade on the board.

It is right to play on spades first. Cash one top heart, then play the spade ace, the spade king and a third spade. If they are 3-3, draw trumps after winning the next trick and claim. Here, though, West will presumably return a trump. Take that in hand and ruff the last spade for a sixth trump trick.

TAKING FLIGHT: It's a bird ... it's a hydroplane ... it's both taking flight during the H1 Unlimited season opener at Guntersville Lake (Alabama) last weekend. A bird flies alongside the U-6 Miss HomeStreet Bank/Miss Madison (above), the U-12 Graham Trucking lifts while racing the U-7 Spirit of Detroit (left, top) and the HomeStreet catches air after hitting a roller while racing the Graham Trucking (left, bottom). In the end it was mostly smooth sailing for the HomeStreet as Jimmy Shane won the Southern Cup in dominating fashion on Sunday. (Staff photos by David Campbell)

H1 Unlimited switched up the race format this weekend to help make up for the small field of boats. Rather than random draws each heat with three boats per race, the six boats each drew a number and were assigned heats numerically allowing for each set of racing to feature four boats with each team racing four times in the preliminaries.

Shane won three heats while Kelly took two and Thompson won one. Thompson's win came in Heat 2B when both Shane and Kelly were penalized for jumping the gun.

With the victory, Shane moves into a tie with Steve David for sixth on the sport's career wins list with 18 wins. Shane succeeded David at the wheel of the Miss Madison Team and grew up idolizing David as a driver.

"I think he's more than double my age, which isn't a bad thing," Shane, who still trails David 18-12 in wins with the Miss Madison Team, said laughing. "It just goes to show you that it's hard to get wins in this sport, it's really hard, so I take everyone that I can get. It's a very proud moment, growing up with my family and seeing the look on my dad's face, it's just huge. To see the look on my mom's face, and my boys' faces, it's just huge and I'm honored."

The victory was also the 32nd all-time for Miss Madison Racing — the 27th since 2007 — and it came at the site of the team's very first win, at Guntersville Lake where Buddy Byers drove Miss Madison to her first victory in 1965.

The H1 fleet now heads north to Madison where they will run for the American Power Boat Association Gold Cup and the Indiana Governor's Cup starting on Friday. Defending national and Gold Cup champion Andrew Tate is expected to join the field in the U-1 Delta/Realtrac for that race.
